

Nově uniklá zpráva od společnosti Rand Corporation odhaluje skutečné motivy evropské destabilizace a války mezi Ruskem a Ukrajinou redpill78.substack.com/p/newly-leaked-report-from-rand-corporation

RAND Corporation se zrodila po 2. světové válce jako jakýsi výzkumný a vývojový think-tank, který by svedl dohromady nejlepší a nejchytřejší mozky Ameriky, aby vytvořil hypotézy a řešil problémy dříve, než vzniknou. Přestože je nezisková a původně koncipovaná jako nestrannická organizace, skupina spojená se CIA a Pentagonem se vyvinula v cokoliv jiného než.

Jejich výzkumné publikace tvrdí, že „vyvíjejí řešení problémů veřejné politiky, která pomohou učinit komunity na celém světě bezpečnějšími, zdravějšími a prosperujícími“. Poskytují výzkum a analýzy problémů, kterým čelí vlády a lidé, často s objektivem toho, co by nejlépe posloužilo vládnoucí elitě Spojených států, zpravodajské a obranné komunitě.

Rusko, jako globální protiváha dominance Spojených států, bylo předmětem zvláštního zájmu RAND a konkrétněji destabilizace a oslabení Ruska. Samozřejmě konečným výsledkem destabilizovaného Ruska by byly silnější Spojené státy, bez ohledu na to, zda v tomto procesu budou statisíce zasaženy válkou, hladem nebo ekonomickou nestabilitou. Pokud se podíváte na webové stránky RANDES, můžete najít stovky blogových příspěvků a výzkumů politik s názvy jako: vše z nedávné doby.

Je jasné, že ruská specializovaná vojenská operace na Ukrajině nebyla jen událostí ze dne na den a od invaze 24. února 2022 měla ukrajinská armáda miliardy dolarů v pomoci z Ameriky a možná i slušnou strategickou pomoc od RAND. také.

Válka je složitý gambit. S konfrontací této velikosti a tolika zapojených mezinárodních hráčů je nepochybné, že ve hře je mnoho motivací. Zdá se, že pro Rusko je bezpečnost na prvním místě. S hrozbou potenciálního vstupu Ukrajiny do NATO, jak navrhuje Kamala Harris, nebo přítomností biologických laboratoří provozovaných společně s DOD zde v Americe, nebo přítomností žoldáků pod vedením CIA složených ze speciálních jednotek z bývalých ruských států, se stává snadno pochopit jeden soubor motivací.

Ale motivace současného ilegálního režimu Spojených států pro pokračující podporu Ukrajiny a radost, se kterou se zdá, že uvrhují Evropu do dlouhé temné zimy, to je trochu mlhavější.

Vstupte, přátelé, do společnosti RAND . Když zde zkoumáme jejich nepřetržité zveřejňování politického výzkumu o zničení Ruska a jeho lidu, najdeme náznaky důvodů. Ale motivace jsou ještě jasnější, pokud jde o výzkum, který se rozhodli nechat na svých webových stránkách nápadně chybět.

V nedávno odhalené výzkumné zprávě napsané společností RAND, datované 25. ledna 2022 a označené jako CONFIDENTIAL, John Mark Dougan zveřejnil to, co může být jednou z nejdůležitějších motivací, které mohou mít Spojené státy při podpoře konfliktu na Ukrajině: udržení moci.

Šestistránková zpráva zveřejněná před začátkem jakéhokoli konfliktu, ale po hrozivém varování ministerstva zahraničí o „útocích pod falešnou vlajkou sponzorovanými Ruskem“ se zdá být fotokopií oficiálního výzkumného produktu RAND, určeného pro Bílý dům a komunitu národní bezpečnosti zde v Americe. Správně, Demokratický národní výbor je zkopírován na výzkumné zprávě, která byla zaměřena na komunitu národní bezpečnosti a možná na členy Bidenova Bílého domu. WHCS a ANSA jsou pro mě záhady, ale myslel jsem, že možná vedly k náčelníkovi štábu a poradci pro národní bezpečnost. Pokud má někdo nějaké nápady, dejte mi prosím vědět do komentářů.

Druhá stránka obsahuje standardní označení autorských práv a jazyk o misi Rand. Na třetí stránce se dostáváme k dobrým věcem!

Není známo, zda zpráva přesahuje 4 stránky zahrnuté ve shrnutí, ale nadpisy a text obsažené na těchto 4 stranách jsou k zatracení. Zdá se, že RAND předpověděl, že ekonomika Spojených států je na pokraji kolapsu. Rostoucí dluh a nekontrolované tisknutí hotovosti v důsledku hospodářského poklesu způsobeného plandemií přivedlo Spojené státy do nejisté pozice. Předpovídají pokračující zhoršování ekonomiky pravděpodobně povede k porážce Demokratické strany v Kongresu i Senátu, což otevře dveře k obžalobě Joea Bidena na příštím zasedání Kongresu.

"Za těchto okolností nelze vyloučit odvolání prezidenta, kterému je třeba se za každou cenu vyhnout."

Tato pasáž sama o sobě demonstruje partyzánskou práci, kterou vykonává RAND, a koordinovanou taktiku používanou mezi Demokratickou stranou a Státem národní bezpečnosti, THE DEEP STATE. Ale co je nejvíce šokující, je délka, kterou navrhují zajít, aby si obě skupiny udržely kontrolu nad národem, aby ochránily Joea Bidena a kohokoli, kdo tahá za nitky ze zákulisí.

Shrnutí začíná názvem: „Oslabení Německa, posílení USA“, přičemž konečným cílem je infuze hotovosti do bankovního systému ze strany evropských zemí a zemí spojených s NATO. Doufejme, že se budeme moci vyhnout značným vojenským a politickým nákladům v tomto procesu.

Jak RAND vidí, největší překážkou k dosažení tohoto cíle je stále rostoucí nezávislost Německa. Zdá se, že tento problém byl vyřešen válkou na Ukrajině a sankcemi vůči Rusku, které vedly k zabití plynovodu Nordstream a přerušení dodávek zemního plynu z Ruska do Německa. To samo o sobě nepochybně povede k tomu, že Německo bude vyžadovat pomoc od jiných evropských národů, pokud doufají, že zachrání své občany, až se přestanou vytápět. Kontrola Německa a jejich vládní rozhodovací proces se zdá být hlavním zájmem RAND, který předpovídá, že destabilizace USA povede k urychlení nezávislosti Německa a nevyhnutelnému konci amerického vlivu. Jakmile se tak stane, RAND věří, že Francie a Německo se spojí spolu s dalšími starými evropskými národy, vytvoření ekonomického a politického konkurenta Spojených států. Dokud lze tyto věci odvrátit, globální dominance Ameriky může být zajištěna.

The sanctions on Russia and the continued pressure from US led influence in the European region, was predicted to affect two things: German consumption of cheap gas from Russia & Russian importation of inexpensive nuclear fuel to France. France & Germany both heavily rely on electricity produced by French nuclear power plants.

These two elements are the very pillars of the German economic model, gas and electricity, and with the war in Ukraine, both of them have or will very shortly, be severed. Germany will look to the west and France will be forced to seek fuel from Canada and Australia, both firmly within the influence of the United States.

In the section entitled “Controlled Crisis”, the author admits that through “our precise actions, it has been possible to block the commissioning of the Nord Stream 2 pipeline”, and suggest Germany must be made to reject Russian natural gas altogether by involving both Russia & Germany in the “military conflict in Ukraine.” Russia has in that time, halted all exports of natural gas to Germany, problem solved! At the time this paper was written, the conflict in Ukraine was little more than a civil war between the East and West of the country. Western (US aligned) Ukraine clearly acted as the aggressor against the East. It’s worth noting that the US was beating the war drums before Putin ever moved a soldier inside Ukraine's borders, so it seems the effort to engage Russia and Europe in the Ukrainian conflict was in the planning stages for some time.

Putin may in turn decide to impose limited counter-sanctions - primarily on Russian energy supplies to Europe. Thus, the damage to the EU countries will be quite comparable to the one to the Russians, and in some countries - primarily in Germany - it will be higher.

The prerequisite for Germany to fall into this trap is the leading role of green parties and ideology in Europe. The German Greens are a strongly dogmatic, if not zealous, movement, which makes it quite easy to make them ignore economic arguments. In this respect, the German Greens somewhat exceed their counterparts in the rest of Europe. Personal features and the lack of professionalism of their leaders - primarily Annalena Baerbock and Robert Habeck - permit to presume that it is next to impossible for them to admit their own mistakes in a timely manner.

Thus, it will be enough to quickly form the media image of Putin's aggressive war to turn the Greens into ardent and hardline supporters of sanctions, a 'party of war'. It will enable the

The author continues to discuss the methods by which the current regime may manufacture the necessary elements to create an economic and humanitarian crisis. Which includes using the German environmentalists of the Green Party coalition and even names two useful idiots who might be successfully led to help create the atmosphere they seek. Even after mistakes have been realized, the enduring damage will make it difficult for current leaders or a new German government to rekindle relations with Russia, especially after Germany has been forced to supply weapons and ammunition to Ukraine per their western partners.

The consequences for these geopolitical moves will be expectedly catastrophic for Germany. Without Russian gas, industry will be forced into shutdown in order to avoid mass die offs of German citizens, leading to shortages in basic products, breakdown in logistic chains and “eventually, a domino effect. A complete standstill at the largest in the chemical, metallurgical, and machine-building, plants is likely, while they have virtually no spare capacity to reduce energy consumption.”

RAND predicts losses to Germany in the hundreds of billions of Euros, causing a collapse in the economy, reduction in the GDP and eventually, total collapse of the EU economy as well. All European currencies will become toxic and far less desirable than the Dollar, leading to an inevitable strengthening of the US economy and a repositioning of the US as the most favored nation. Of course, China also stands to benefit from the economic conditions in Europe as well.

The cumulative losses of the German economy can be estimated only approximately. Even if the restriction of Russian supplies is limited to 2022, its consequences will last for several years, and the total losses could reach 200-300 billion euros. Not only will it deliver a devastating blow to the German economy, but the entire EU economy will inevitably collapse. We are talking not about a decline in economy growth pace, but about a sustained recession and a decline in GDP only in material production by 3-4% per year for the next 5-6 years. Such a fall will inevitably cause panic in the financial markets and may bring them to a collapse.

In addition to economic woes, mass migration is expected as jobs dry up and skilled labor is no longer needed. In that event, of course their only recourse will be to come to the United States, where our booming economy will welcome them to help offset the jobs that will inevitably be created.

The US economy is saved, American society is distracted and “electoral risks” are abated, bringing Democrats back into control, should RANDs predictions come to pass. At this time, the entirety of the National Security State’s plans have not materialized, but should they, this research report may come to become very relevant.

In the meantime, we must remain a counterbalance to the State itself, as I predict we will be taking back control of the House and Senate in 2023, with articles of impeachment to be entered shortly thereafter and full scale investigations of the 2020 election to coincide along with them. The best laid plans of mice and men can still go wrong and although the Deep State has become more entrenched in power today than at any time in history, the Democrat Party has laid waste to America and the people of this nation see them for what they are. Vote in November and fire these bastards.

Executive Summary

Weakening Germany, strengthening the U.S.

The present state of the U.S. economy does not suggest that it can function without financial and material support from external sources. The quantitative easing policy, which the Fed has resorted to regularly in recent years, as well as the uncontrolled issue of cash during the 2020 and 2021 Covid lockdowns, have led to a sharp increase in the external debt and an increase in the dollar supply.

The continuing deterioration of the economic situation is highly likely to lead to a loss in the position of the Democratic Party in Congress and the Senate in the forthcoming elections to be held in November 2022. The impeachment of the President cannot be ruled out under these circumstances, which must be avoided at all costs.

There is an urgent need for resources to flow into the national economy, especially the banking system. Only European countries bound by EU and NATO commitments will be able to provide them without significant military and political costs for us.

The major obstacle to it is growing independence of Germany. Although it still is a country with limited sovereignty, for decades it has been consistently moving toward lifting these limitations and becoming a fully independent state. This movement is slow and cautious, but steady. Extrapolation shows that the ultimate goal can be reached only in several decades. However, if social and economic problems in the United States escalate, the pace could accelerate significantly.

An additional factor contributing to Germany's economic independence is Brexit. With the withdrawal of the UK from the EU structures, we have lost a meaningful opportunity to influence the negotiation of crossgovernmental decisions.

It is fear of our negative response which by and large determines the relatively slow speed of those changes. If one day we abandon Europe, there will be a good chance for Germany and France to get to a full political consensus. Then, Italy and other Old Europe countries - primarily the former ECSC members - may join it on certain conditions. Britain, which is currently outside the European Union, will not be able to resist the pressure of the Franco-German duo alone. If implemented, this scenario will eventually turn Europe into not only an economic, but also a political competitor to the United States.

Besides, if the U.S. is for a certain period engulfed by domestic problems, the Old Europe will be able to more effectively resist the influence of the U.S.-oriented Eastern European countries.

Vulnerabilities in German and EU Economy

An increase in the flow of resources from Europe to U.S. can be expected if Germany begins to experience a controlled economic crisis. The pace of economic development in the EU depends almost without alternative on the state of the German economy. It is Germany that bears the brunt of the expenditure directed towards the poorer EU members.

The current German economic model is based on two pillars. These are unlimited access to cheap Russian energy resources and to cheap French electric power, thanks to the operation of nuclear power plants. The importance of the first factor is considerably higher. Halting Russian supplies can well create a systemic crisis that would be devastating for the German economy and, indirectly, for the entire European Union.

The French energy sector could also soon begin to experience heavy problems. The predictable stop of Russian-controlled nuclear fuel supplies, combined with the unstable situation in the Sahel region, would make French energy sector critically dependent on Australian and Canadian fuel. In connection with the establishment of AUKUS, it creates new opportunities to exercise pressure. However this issue is beyond the scope of the present report.

A Controlled Crisis

Due to coalition constraints, the German leadership is not in full control of the situation in the country. Thanks to our precise actions, it has been possible to block the commissioning of the Nord Stream 2 pipeline, despite the opposition of lobbyists from the steel and chemical industries. However, the dramatic deterioration of the living standards may encourage the leadership to reconsider its policy and return to the idea of European sovereignty and strategic autonomy.

The only feasible way to guarantee Germany's rejection of Russian energy supplies is to involve both sides in the military conflict in Ukraine. Our further actions in this country will inevitably lead to a military response from Russia. Russians will obviously not be able to leave unanswered the massive Ukrainian army pressure on the unrecognized Donbas republics. That would make possible to declare Russia an aggressor and apply to it the entire package of sanctions prepared beforehand.

Putin may in turn decide to impose limited counter-sanctions - primarily on Russian energy supplies to Europe. Thus, the damage to the EU countries will be quite comparable to the one to the Russians, and in some countries - primarily in Germany - it will be higher.

The prerequisite for Germany to fall into this trap is the leading role of green parties and ideology in Europe. The German Greens are a strongly dogmatic, if not zealous, movement, which makes it quite easy to make them ignore economic arguments. In this respect, the German Greens somewhat exceed their counterparts in the rest of Europe. Personal features and the lack of professionalism of their leaders - primarily Annalena Baerbock and Robert Habeck - permit to presume that it is next to impossible for them to admit their own mistakes in a timely manner.

Thus, it will be enough to quickly form the media image of Putin's aggressive war to turn the Greens into ardent and hardline supporters of sanctions, a 'party of war'. It will enable the sanctions regime to be introduced without any obstacles. The lack of professionalism of the current leaders will not allow a setback in the future, even when the negative impact of the chosen policy becomes obvious enough. The partners in the German governing coalition will simply have to follow their allies - at least until the load of economic problems outweighs the fear of provoking a government crisis.

However, even when the SPD and the FDP are ready to go against the Greens, the possibility for the next government to return relations with Russia to normal soon enough will be noticeably limited. Germany's involvement in large supplies of weapons and military equipment to the Ukrainian army will inevitably generate a strong mistrust in Russia, which will make the negotiation process quite lengthy.

If war crimes and Russian aggression against Ukraine are confirmed, the German political leadership will not be able to overcome its EU partners' veto on assistance to Ukraine and reinforced sanctions packages. This will ensure a sufficiently long gap in cooperation between Germany and Russia, which will make large German economic operators uncompetitive.

Expected Consequences

A reduction in Russian energy supplies - ideally, a complete halt of such supplies - would lead to disastrous outcomes for German industry. The need to divert significant amounts of Russian gas for winter heating of residential and public facilities will further exacerbate the shortages. Lockdowns in industrial enterprises will cause shortages of components and spare parts for manufacturing, a breakdown of logistic chains, and, eventually, a domino effect. A complete standstill at the largest in the chemical, metallurgical, and machine-building, plants is likely, while they have virtually no spare capacity to reduce energy consumption. It could lead to the shutting down of continuous-cycle enterprises, which would mean their destruction.

The cumulative losses of the German economy can be estimated only approximately. Even if the restriction of Russian supplies is limited to 2022, its consequences will last for several years, and the total losses could reach 200-300 billion euros. Not only will it deliver a devastating blow to the German economy, but the entire EU economy will inevitably collapse. We are talking not about a decline in economy growth pace, but about a sustained recession and a decline in GDP only in material production by 3-4% per year for the next 5-6 years. Such a fall will inevitably cause panic in the financial markets and may bring them to a collapse.

The euro will inevitably, and most likely irreversibly, fall below the dollar. A sharp fall of euro will consequently cause its global sale. It will become a toxic currency, and all countries in the world will rapidly reduce its share in their forex reserves. This gap will be primarily filled with dollar and yuan.

Another inevitable consequence of a prolonged economic recession will be a sharp drop in living standards and rising unemployment (up to 200,000-400,000 in Germany alone), which will entail the exodus of skilled labour and well-educated young people. There are literally no other destinations for such migration other than the United States today. A somewhat smaller, but also quite significant flow of migrants can be expected from other EU countries.

The scenario under consideration will thus serve to strengthen the national financial condition both indirectly and most directly. In the short term, it will reverse the trend of the looming economic recession and, in addition, consolidate American society by distracting it from immediate economic concerns. This, in turn, will reduce electoral risks.

In the medium term (4-5 years), the cumulative benefits of capital flight, re-oriented logistical flows and reduced competition in major industries may amount to USD 7-9 trillion.

Unfortunately, China is also expected to benefit over the medium term from this emerging scenario. At the same time, Europe's deep political dependence on the U.S. allows us to effectively neutralise possible attempts by individual European states to draw closer to China.
